TURNKEY MECHANICAL AND PNEUMATIC MATERIAL HANDLING SYSTEMS TO BE OFFERED BY ROBERTS & SCHAEFER AND CLYDE BERGEMANN DELTA DUCON

Chicago, October 12, 2009—Two long-time service and equipment providers to the power industry have announced the formation of a strategic alliance to offer turnkey single-source design, engineering and installation of mechanical and pneumatic material handling systems.

Roberts & Schaefer Company and Clyde Bergemann Delta Ducon will focus primarily on ash pond elimination due to wet-to-dry fly ash conversion, dry bottom ash handling, and sorbent injection technology. According to the companies, dry ash handling, in particular, provides significant environmental benefits and lower operating costs.

The alliance takes advantage of the strengths of both companies by offering design, supply, construction, installation and project management. Customers will benefit from the single-source approach by reducing their economic outlay and increasing both the efficiency of the project and performance of the system.

Dave Waltersdorf, Vice President of Engineering at Roberts & Schaefer, stated, “Until now there has not been a single source for utilities to get total turnkey systems for ash handling and dry scrubbers. But we can now do the whole job, taking total responsibility for our customers for equipment and installation, which will result in considerable cost savings and system efficiencies.”
